“ Uncle Eddie was the biggest and toughest man I ever knew he was 6'3 and had the strength that I believe could snap a brick in half without struggling if he wanted to. He had jokes so great he could have been a comedian that would make you forget about Saturday night live and make Larry the cable guy look like an amateur. Eddie was a father of 3 kids but I'm pretty sure all or most of us thought of him like a father as well. When we all got the bad news he had cancer I think it hurt us all but I also think we all knew that Eddie wasn't gonna go down so easy cause he was so tough and brave he could beat God in an arm wrestle and knock out the devil with one hand tied behind his back. Sadly the time has come and I miss him but I'll always remember him as a legend and as Eddie the wise the nickname I gave him.

He loved to tell jokes and talked to everyone spending time with his family especially his grandkids. Thanks to Willow Brook for providing the care he needed. He will be missed deeply.

“ His one and only grandchild (Ann-Marie) has lots of awesome memories from this past summer. Even though dad was sick he still had enough strength to always play with the baby. Your deeply missed. We love you always. Xoxo
